

The Monthly Newsletter — Plan & Review Kit

Prepared for review with Aleksandra · Draft for discussion, not yet approved to send

This document gives you three editorial outlines to choose from, an operations & maintenance plan for running the newsletter every month, and the three finished design layouts — all in this one file. Nothing here is live or sent — it is all for you and Aleksandra to review, mark up and approve.

1 · My recommendation on the fraud / trust angle

Short answer: yes — and it can become your single strongest differentiator, provided we frame it the right way. Hospice fraud is a real, documented problem, and Los Angeles County was at the center of it. Because your brand is built on Compliance-Led Care, you are uniquely positioned to talk about it — not as an accusation, but as protection for families.

How to do it safely and powerfully

- Educate, don't accuse. Frame it as “how to recognize a legitimate hospice.” Give families red flags and a way to verify any provider. This empowers the reader instead of scaring them.
- Never name or imply a specific competitor. Naming a company as fraudulent — even indirectly — is a legal (defamation) risk. Speak about the pattern, not the players.
- Cite public authorities only. The California State Auditor's findings and the state's decision to pause new hospice licensing (beginning 2022) are on the public record. Attribute facts to them; avoid statistics you cannot source.
- Don't over-claim. Avoid “most hospices are frauds” or fear-based language. Let your credentials (Medicare-Certified · CDPH-Licensed · ACHC-Accredited) be the quiet reassurance.
- Anti-Kickback awareness. When this goes to referral partners, keep the message about quality and integrity, never inducements.

Bottom line: done as consumer education, this builds trust, protects families, and quietly proves you are the opposite of the bad actors. That is exactly the reputation that grows census and makes the company attractive to a future buyer.

2 · Three outlines to choose from

Each is a complete monthly format with a different center of gravity. You can pick one, or rotate them (e.g. the Trust issue quarterly, Care & Comfort in between). I've mapped each to one of the three layouts, but any outline works in any layout.

OUTLINE A

“The Trust Issue” — Compliance-Led / Consumer Protection

Audience: Families, community, and referral partners · Tone: Steady, protective, authoritative · Pairs with: Layout 3 (Spotlight)

1. Masthead + one-line mission — “Care That Honors Life.”
2. Feature: “How to Know a Hospice You Can Trust” — the fraud story framed as family protection: what happened in California/LA, and the red flags to watch for.
3. The 60-second checklist — how any family can verify a hospice (license, Medicare certification, accreditation, 24/7 access, written plan of care).
4. Why it matters at Eternal Life — a short, non-boastful note tying to the Compliance-Led Care pillar.
5. One comfort note — a brief, warm item so the issue isn't all serious (e.g. an integrative-comfort tip).
6. Call to action — “Questions about hospice? Talk to a nurse, 24/7.” + refer link.

OUTLINE B

“Care & Comfort” — Warm, Family-Facing

Audience: Families & community · Tone: Gentle, human, reassuring · Pairs with: Layout 1 (Editorial)

1. A note from the team — 3–4 warm sentences setting the season's theme.
2. Feature story — drawn from the Journal (e.g. Music at the Bedside, Sound Baths, Caring for the Caregiver).
3. Comfort tip of the month — one practical, doable idea for caregivers.
4. Resource spotlight — the Family Guide, or a coverage/insurance explainer.
5. Community & gratitude — volunteers, giving, or a partner thank-you (with the standard non-affiliation note where needed).
6. Call to action — read the Journal / reach a nurse / volunteer.

“The Referral Partner Briefing” — For Case Managers & Physicians

Audience: Discharge planners, case managers, physicians · Tone: Concise, professional, useful · Pairs with: Layout 2 (Digest)

1. Header + “refer in 60 seconds” button up top.
2. What sets our care apart this month — one clinical or service capability (e.g. GIP, integrative comfort, rapid response).
3. Compliance & quality note — credentials, response times, the integrity message (this is where the trust theme lives for partners).
4. Coverage snapshot — Ventura + LA County, settings served.
5. Quick resource for their patients — a family-facing link they can pass along.
6. Direct line — name, phone, fax, secure referral link.

3 · Ongoing operations & maintenance

A newsletter only builds trust if it arrives reliably. Here is a simple, repeatable operating rhythm so it never becomes a scramble.

Monthly cadence & roles

STEP	WHO	WHEN
Pick the issue theme & feature	Team lead	~3 weeks before send
Draft the copy (reuse a layout)	Writer	~2 weeks before
Compliance & accuracy review (see checklist)	Aleksandra / clinical sign-off	~1 week before
Final approval	Aleksandra	2–3 days before
Load, test-send, schedule	Sender	Send day
Review results, file the issue	Team lead	Week after

Suggested rhythm: same day each month (e.g. the second Tuesday, ~10am). Predictability improves open rates and keeps the workload calm.

Sending platform

Use a proper email service (not personal Gmail) so you get consent tracking, unsubscribe handling and deliverability. MailerLite or Brevo are cost-friendly and a good fit; both have free tiers to start.

Avoid platforms built for e-commerce. Keep no patient health information (PHI) in any newsletter — that keeps you clear of HIPAA exposure.

List & consent hygiene

- Only email people who opted in or are legitimate business contacts.
- Segment two lists: Families/Community and Referral Partners.
- Every send needs a working unsubscribe link and your physical mailing address (CAN-SPAM law).
- Honor unsubscribes immediately; never buy lists.

Design maintenance

- Keep the three layouts as reusable templates — each month you only swap the words and one image, not the design.
- Store the master files in `exports/newsletter/` and save each sent issue as `issue-YYYY-MM.html` so you build an archive.
- Stay on-brand: plum, gold and cream; Fraunces headlines, Jost body; the infinity lockup at the top.

Measuring success

Track three numbers only: list growth, open rate, and click rate (which links get tapped). Healthy healthcare-newsletter benchmarks are roughly 30–40% opens and 2–5% clicks; use them as a compass, not a grade.

Suggested first three issues

MONTH	THEME	FEATURE
Issue 01	Trust (Outline A)	How to know a hospice you can trust
Issue 02	Comfort (Outline B)	Small comforts: music & sound at the bedside
Issue 03	Partners (Outline C)	Refer with confidence — our compliance posture

4 · The three layouts in this kit

The three finished designs follow on the next pages, each filled with sample “Issue 01” content so you can picture the real thing. All three print cleanly on standard paper.

Layout 1 — Editorial

Elegant, single-column magazine feel. Serif hero, a feature story, and a sidebar of quick links. Best for the warm Care & Comfort issues.

Layout 2 — Digest

Compact and scannable — short stacked blocks with clear headings. Built for busy referral partners.

Layout 3 — Spotlight

One bold feature takes the whole top of the page, followed by a slim checklist and a call-to-action strip. Built for the Trust issue — it gives the fraud/protection story the room it deserves.

5 · Compliance checklist (run before every send)

Every medical/therapy mention framed as comfort & quality of life — no claims to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent.

Any Medicare statement is accurate (covered in full with no hospice-benefit deductible; small possible costs only for some comfort meds / inpatient respite).

No competitor named or implied; fraud facts attributed to public authorities only.

No patient health information (PHI) anywhere in the issue.

Referral-partner content speaks to quality/integrity, never inducements (Anti-Kickback / Stark).

Working unsubscribe link + physical mailing address present (CAN-SPAM).

Coverage stated as Ventura & Los Angeles County only.

This is an internal planning draft prepared for review. Content, statistics and framing must complete the compliance checklist above and receive final approval before any distribution. References to hospice fraud describe publicly reported findings by state authorities and are presented for consumer education only; they do not describe or refer to any specific provider.

Each layout is a complete, ready-to-use template. Any of the three outlines can be dropped into any of these designs.

CARE & COMFORT

Small comforts, in the moments that matter most

A note from our team: comfort in hospice reaches past the clinical — to the body, the mind and the spirit. This month we share a few of the gentle things that help a hard day feel a little softer.

Music & sound at the bedside

A familiar melody can return us, in an instant, to a kitchen from forty years ago. In hospice, that closeness becomes a gentle comfort — a way to reach someone when words have grown difficult. Families tell us the same small moments: a shoulder that eases down, breathing that slows, a flicker of recognition at the first bars of a favorite song.

These comforts are offered for ease and quality of life. They accompany medical care — they never replace it, and they are not intended to diagnose, treat or cure any condition.

COMFORT TIP OF THE MONTH

Build a “life soundtrack” — the songs that marked a loved one’s life: their era, their wedding, their faith. Keep the volume low and follow their lead. Sometimes humming along says what conversation no longer can.

THE TRUST ISSUE

How to know a hospice you can trust

Not every hospice is what it claims to be. Here is how to protect the people you love — and what to look for in care that truly honors life.

Over the last few years, California — and Los Angeles County in particular — became the center of a documented surge in hospice fraud. A 2022 report by the California State Auditor found widespread indicators of fraud among newly licensed hospices, and the state paused the issuing of new hospice licenses that same year.

We believe families deserve to understand this — not to frighten anyone, but to protect them. A trustworthy hospice is easy to recognize once you know what to look for, and the checks below take only a few minutes.

Red flags to watch for

Be cautious of any provider that recruits door-to-door or offers gifts or cash to enroll, pressures someone to sign up who is not terminally ill, cannot show a current license and Medicare certification, or is vague about who will actually visit and how to reach a nurse.

THE 60-SECOND TRUST CHECKLIST

- ✓ Medicare certification — ask for it, and look them up on Medicare's Care Compare.
- ✓ State license — a legitimate California hospice is licensed by CDPH.
- ✓ Accreditation — ACHC, CHAP or The Joint Commission signals outside oversight.
- ✓ 24/7 nurse access — you should be able to reach a nurse any hour.
- ✓ A written plan of care — clear about who visits, how often, and what's covered.

Where we stand

Eternal Life Hospice is Medicare-Certified, CDPH-Licensed and ACHC-Accredited. Compliance-Led Care is one of our founding pillars — not a slogan, but the standard we hold every day. If you ever want to verify us, we welcome it.

If a hospice ever makes you uneasy, trust that instinct and ask questions. The right one will welcome them.

Questions about hospice? Talk to a nurse — any hour, any day.

Fraud references describe publicly reported findings by California state authorities (including the California State Auditor) and the state's 2022 pause on new hospice licenses. Presented for consumer education only; this does not describe or refer to any specific provider.
