Dear Stephanie,

My name is Aleksandra Dubina, founder and CEO of Eternal Life Hospice — a Medicare-certified, ACHC-accredited hospice serving Ventura and Los Angeles County. With nearly two decades in healthcare and over eleven years in hospice, our team has been intentional about every relationship we pursue, and I wanted to reach out to you personally.

A few days ago we sent out the first issue of The Eternal Care Brief — a publication our team created to put honest, clinical information directly into the hands of professionals like you. I hope it found its way to you.

We reached out to PIH Health specifically because reputation and standards matter to us. The hospice industry in California has faced a real credibility crisis — fraud investigations and Medicare suspensions have shaken families' trust across the board. Our team made a deliberate decision to take action: to provide credible, clear information to providers who support families, and to educate families so they know they have a choice to examine the industry for themselves when facing one of the most difficult decisions a person can face.

Your work in surgical services resonates with our own practice — the patients who move through your teams often face the most significant transitions of their lives, and the care extended in that handoff shapes everything that follows — and we'd like to extend a personal invitation to be a voice in The Eternal Care Brief. We envision credible voices from the field, leaders willing to share a perspective or a challenge worth talking about. If that ever appeals to you, we'd be honored.

Please feel free to reach out to me directly. And lastly, thank you for your work in surgical services — three decades of guiding patients through their most critical moments is a commitment to care that deserves to be acknowledged.

I welcome your call or text, and I look forward to the possibility of meeting or simply having a conversation to see how Eternal can support your efforts at PIH.

Warm regards,

Aleksandra Dubina
