

PIH Health — Personal Follow-Up Letters

8 individual notes from Aleksandra Dubina · Family Guide PDF attached to each · One recipient per send

⚠ FOR YOUR REVIEW ONLY — NOTHING SENDS UNTIL YOU APPROVE AND PROVIDE YOUR SIGNATURE

#	Name	Role	Organization
1	Cristy Hernandez	RN, Infection Prevention	PIH Health Downey
2	Melissa Perez	Quality Reporting System Administrator	PIH Health
3	Brent Melton	VP, Support Services	PIH Health
4	Jeanette Wehrberg	Clinical Education, HR	PIH Health
5	Noel Coppinger	VP, Revenue Cycle & Managed Care	PIH Health
6	Scott Bremer	Director, Compensation, Benefits & HRIS	PIH Health
7	Jeanette Abundis	Sr. Director, Emergency & Critical Care	PIH Health Whittier & Downey
8	Stephanie Jones	Director, Surgical Services	PIH Health Downey

LETTER 1 OF 8

Cristy Hernandez
RN, Infection Prevention · PIH Health Downey
cristy.hernandez@pihhealth.org

Subject: The Care Brief — and a resource for the families you see

Dear Cristy,

I noticed you spent real time with our first issue of The Eternal Care Brief, and I wanted to reach out personally to say thank you.

Infection prevention shapes every safe transition a patient makes — including the transition home at the end of life. When families leave the hospital with hospice in place, the standards you hold inside your walls are the ones we work to carry into the home.

I've attached our Family Guide — a plain-language walkthrough of how families can evaluate any hospice: current Medicare certification, CDPH license, independent accreditation, and who actually answers at 2 a.m. Please feel free to share it with colleagues or families who could use a clear starting point.

If it would ever be useful to talk about how we handle infection-control practices in the home setting, I'd welcome the conversation.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

□ Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

LETTER 2 OF 8

Melissa Perez

Quality Reporting System Administrator · PIH Health

melissa.perez@pihhealth.org

Subject: Thank you for reading the Care Brief

Dear Melissa,

Thank you for spending time with our first issue of The Eternal Care Brief — I saw the issue traveled well at PIH Health, and I wanted to write to you directly.

You work in quality reporting, so you know better than most that the data behind a care organization tells the real story. That's the spirit we built the Care Brief around: what a defined benefit like hospice actually includes, and how families can judge how well any agency delivers it.

I've attached our Family Guide — it walks families through the questions worth asking any hospice, including the credentials to verify and a side-by-side worksheet. If it's ever helpful to your teams or to families navigating a discharge, please pass it along.

I'd be glad to connect anytime.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

📎 Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

LETTER 3 OF 8

Brent Melton

VP, Support Services · PIH Health

brent.melton@pihhealth.org

Subject: A resource for your teams — with thanks

Dear Brent,

I wanted to thank you personally for the time you spent with the first issue of The Eternal Care Brief.

Support services touch nearly every step of a patient's journey, including the hardest one — when a family is preparing to take someone home for the last chapter. Those moments go better when the family knows what to ask and what good care looks like.

That's why I've attached our Family Guide. It's a plain-language resource: what every Medicare-certified hospice must cover, the three credentials to confirm, and a worksheet families can fill in as they call agencies. It isn't a pitch — it works no matter which hospice a family chooses.

If it would be useful to your teams, please share it freely. And if a conversation would ever help, my direct line is below.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

□ Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

LETTER 4 OF 8

Jeanette Wehrberg

Clinical Education, HR · PIH Health

jeanette.wehrberg@pihhealth.org

Subject: A teaching resource for end-of-life conversations

Dear Jeanette,

Thank you for reading our first issue of The Eternal Care Brief so thoroughly — as someone in clinical education, your attention means a great deal.

Clinicians often tell us the hardest conversation to prepare staff for is the hospice conversation: what the benefit includes, what changes at home, what to say when a family asks “how do we choose?” We wrote our Family Guide partly with educators in mind — it lays out the Medicare hospice benefit in plain language, the credentials any agency should hold, and the questions families should ask.

I’ve attached it here. If it’s ever useful as a handout or a reference in your education work, you’re welcome to use it — and I’m happy to talk through anything in it.

Warm regards,

Aleksandra

[Aleksandra’s signature block]

□ Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

LETTER 5 OF 8

Noel Coppinger

VP, Revenue Cycle & Managed Care · PIH Health

noel.coppinger@pihhealth.org

Subject: Thank you — and a clear explainer on the hospice benefit

Dear Noel,

I wanted to thank you personally for spending time with the first issue of The Eternal Care Brief.

From where you sit, you see what many families never do: how much smoother care goes when the benefit is understood correctly from the start. Hospice is one of the most misunderstood benefits in Medicare — families often don't realize the core coverage is defined and consistent, and that the real differences between agencies are in delivery.

Our attached Family Guide explains exactly that, in plain language, with a worksheet families can use to compare agencies side by side. Please feel free to share it wherever it's useful.

If a conversation about how we work with hospitals and payers would ever be of value, I'd welcome it.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

□ Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

Scott Bremer

Director, Compensation, Benefits & HRIS · PIH Health

scott.bremer@pihhealth.org

Subject: Thank you for reading — a resource your colleagues may find useful

Dear Scott,

Thank you for the time you spent with our first issue of The Eternal Care Brief — I wanted to reach out personally.

Benefits work is ultimately about people at their most human moments, and few moments are more human than a family navigating end-of-life care for someone they love. Employees facing that often don't know where to start.

I've attached our Family Guide — a plain-language walkthrough of the Medicare hospice benefit, the credentials to verify in any agency, and the questions worth asking. It's agency-neutral by design; it helps a family choose well, whoever they choose.

If it would ever be useful to colleagues or in the resources you point employees toward, please share it freely.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

□ Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

Jeanette Abundis

Sr. Director, Emergency & Critical Care · PIH Health Whittier & Downey

jeanette.abundis@pihhealth.org

Subject: For your ED and critical care teams — with thanks

Dear Jeanette,

Thank you for reading the first issue of The Eternal Care Brief — I wanted to write to you directly.

Your teams meet families on the hardest days, often when a hospice decision arrives suddenly in the ED or the ICU. In those moments, families need clarity fast: what the benefit covers, whether an agency can admit the same day, and who will actually respond at 2 a.m.

Our attached Family Guide answers exactly those questions in plain language, with a worksheet families can use even under pressure. Please feel free to share it with your case managers, social workers, or any family who needs a starting point.

If it would ever help to talk about crisis-level hospice response — continuous care, same-day admission — I'd welcome the conversation.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

□ Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

LETTER 8 OF 8

Stephanie Jones

Director, Surgical Services · PIH Health Downey

stephanie.jones@drmc.org

Subject: Thank you for reading the Care Brief

Dear Stephanie,

Thank you for the time you spent with our first issue of The Eternal Care Brief — I noticed, and I wanted to reach out personally.

After three decades in surgical services, you've seen every kind of transition a patient can make. The transition to comfort-focused care is the one families are least prepared for — most don't know what the hospice benefit includes or how to tell one agency from another.

I've attached our Family Guide, which walks families through it: the defined Medicare benefit, the three credentials to confirm, and the questions that reveal how an agency really operates. It's deliberately agency-neutral — useful whichever hospice a family chooses.

Please share it wherever it helps. And if a conversation would ever be useful, I'd be glad to connect.

Warm regards,
Aleksandra

[Aleksandra's signature block]

📎 Attachment: ELH_Family_Guide.pdf

